

College of Teaching

Where is the teacher voice in the College to date?

- The College of Teaching has always been driven by the profession. It is not a government initiative.
- The idea was first broached at a residential held by the Prince's Teaching Institute (PTI), who then established a Teacher Committee drawn from a wide cross-section of schools and with a wide range of experience, and a Commission to work on the idea further.
- Appetite for a College of Teaching is growing. In a survey conducted by The Education Company for Claim Your College in early 2015, over 13,000 individuals took part. 75% of these were classroom teachers and subject leaders. 63% would pay a membership fee.
- The recruitment of Founding Trustees for the College of Teaching has been led by a Selection Committee that is truly representative of the profession across maintained, academy and independent schools; primary, secondary and SEN.
- Of the thirteen Founding Trustees, five are teachers and two headteachers with the remaining trustees bringing a range of professional skills needed to set up a robust organisation. Together they will take forward the direction of the College in consultation with the profession.

- The teaching professional's voice is paramount in the College of Teaching and we want as many teachers and schools to engage as possible. It is vital that teachers and the profession own this organisation from the outset.
- Since the Claim Your College coalition submitted its College of Teaching proposal for start-up support in February 2015, it has been supported by over 450 organisations and individuals from across the education sector.
- To encourage teachers to raise awareness amongst their networks, Claim Your College offers a range of resources and information to those who would like to host their own discussions and debates.
- You can read what teachers have said about the College to date on the website.

- The College of Teaching is the new chartered professional body for the teaching profession.
- The Claim Your College coalition, backed by over 450 organisations and individuals, is taking forward developments around the College of Teaching in collaboration with practising teachers, school leaders, unions, subject associations and other leading education bodies and third sector organisations.
- Claim Your College is underpinned by a determination that our current activity is a stepping stone to a teacher-led future. We will not allow anything or anyone to impose their will on the long-term future of what must be a profession-led College. We are dedicated to making the voice of the serving teacher paramount over the three-year incubation and consultation period of the College.
